

Peace River Pulp Division: An Alberta's Top 65 Employers

Peace River, Alberta, February 5, 2014

Daishowa-Marubeni International Ltd. (DMI), Peace River Pulp Division (PRPD) has been named one of the top 65 employers within Alberta for 2014.

When companies win awards they do so for one reason: because of the efforts and abilities of each and every individual who collectively make it an outstanding organization.

In order to build a successful company, PRPD understands that if they take care of the people, production takes care of itself. Starting with their hiring process. DMI knows that as a part of the hiring team, team members will identify which individual has the attitude and aptitude to best fit the role they are seeking to fill. They hire the future success of their area and the PRPD organization. Once orientated, it is their mentorship, guidance, and their interactions that support the success of each individual – PRPD's training and policies were developed by the team members. Their input changes the way PRPD conducts their business. The Team's focus on the process in terms of what is working, and identifying what needs improvement, is critical to their success. But it is when Team Members step up during times of crisis – when a team member needs help or when there are production issues – that is when the PRPD Team Members shine.

Why is DMI Peace River Pulp Division one of Alberta's Top 65 companies to work for? Because at the end of the day, most companies have pension and benefit programs, they have differing salaries and incentives, and there are various perks offered – but at PRPD, it is the people and the effort they put into their work that make this company stand above the rest. That's why DMI Peace River Pulp Division is an Alberta Top 65 employer.
